Standing Faculty Position in Sculpture

The School of Design at the University of Pennsylvania, Department of Fine Arts seeks qualified applicants for a full-time standing faculty position in the area of Sculpture as a tenured or tenure-track appointment, rank commensurate with experience. The position is anticipated to start on July 1, 2016. This is an appointment to the standing faculty, who are responsible for maintaining and extending the discipline of sculpture through their teaching, creative practice, leadership and participation in the responsibilities of the Department and School.

A position is available for candidates who are qualified to offer undergraduate and graduate-level instruction in studio courses and seminars and whose teaching will be centered in areas addressing the expanded field of sculpture in a culturally engaged contemporary art practice. Ideal candidates will have a broad interest in the history of visual arts, design, contemporary fabrication technologies, and sculpture, acknowledging the relationships across these practices.

A review of applications will continue until the position is filled. Applicants should provide a Letter of Application that addresses their personal work, research interests, and teaching philosophy; a curriculum vitae; a portfolio of work; publications, catalogs and reviews; samples of student work; and the names and contact information for three references. Applicants should also provide evidence of an innovative practice and three or more years of experience in studio teaching. Applicants must have either a Master of Fine Arts or equivalent experience in their area of specialization.

The University of Pennsylvania is an Equal Opportunity Employer. Minorities, Females, Individuals with Disabilities, and Protected Veterans are especially encouraged to apply.

All application materials are to be submitted online via <https://penndesign.slideroom.com/>
