Biographical/Historical Sketch

Charles Willing, senior partner of the firm of Willing, Sims & Talbutt, was born in Philadelphia, the son of George and Anna Shippen Willing. He attended Chestnut Hill Academy in the city before graduating from St. Paul's School in Concord, NH in 1902. Willing studied architecture at the University of Pennsylvania, where he earned a B. S. Arch. in 1906. After graduation, he worked in the office of Brockie & Hastings for five years, and then joined the firm of Furness, Evans & Co., where he was named an associate before his departure. During World War I, Willing served as a first lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps, remodeling and building hospitals. At the close of the war he returned to Philadelphia, opening an architectural office in 1919 with another former associate from the Furness office, Joseph P. Sims, who had completed his degree at Penn shortly after Willing. Willing & Sims were joined in 1921 by James Talbutt, who had been a classmate of Willing's at Penn and also had been in the Furness office. Willing's interest and skill in landscape architecture played a significant role in the firm's success in domestic commissions for the region's elite in the period before World War II, and even led him into the development and marketing of a line of garden ornaments.

Scope and Content Note

This collection comprises three groups of items that document aspects of the student, architectural and garden design work of Charles Willing (Willing, Sims & Talbutt, architects). These groups include: one example of Willing's student work from the University of Pennsylvania; three photographs of the Tyler Residence (one of the firm's most significant commissions); and a third group of items (two drawings and a cast concrete garden edge), prepared for an "Exhibit of Original Garden Ornament at Willing'swood," illustrating various garden ornaments for sale.

The collection contains no correspondence or accounts of Willing, Sims & Talbutt, no architectural drawings for the Tyler Residence and no architectural drawings for buildings at the Willing Residence (Willingswood).

The collection is arranged in three series:

- I. Drawings
- II. Photographs.
- III. Three-dimensional Objects.

A full index to projects represented in this collection is found in Appendix A.
