REFORMATTING TOURISM

SPAIN STUDY ABROAD PROGRAM | PENND DESIGN | MAY 20th - JUNE 18th 2018
Eduardo Rega (PennDesign) in partnership with Toni Gelabert (Universidad Politécnica de Madrid) + Néstor Montenegro (Universidad Europea de Madrid)

Introduction:

The Spain Study Abroad Program Reformatting Tourism is a three year research and design project on the architectures, urbanisms and politics of tourism in Madrid, Barcelona and Palma de Mallorca (Balearic Islands). In collaboration with grassroots organizations in all three cities, we will study the impacts of deregulated mass tourism and propose critical reformatting tactics and strategies that pursue a sustainable balance between the visited and the visitors.

After deindustrialization, Spain’s economy has relied excessively on the service sector, with touristic exploitation being it’s most visible expression. Mass tourism has become the main economic sector of the country since the 2008 economic crisis. While stemming from similar politics and financial models, deregulated and exploitative tourism takes various forms in different parts of Spain’s geography: Madrid’s turistification\(^2\) has been demonstrated to trigger patterns of social segregation and processes of gentrification; In Barcelona, thousands of tourists travelling in cruise ships have been flooding the city’s historic centre and short-term sublet companies such as Airbnb have been driving up housing costs and forcing residents out of their city; Palma de Mallorca has recently experienced records in the numbers of visitors, hotel occupancy and corporate profits together with an increase in job insecurity, housing prices, saturation of infrastructure and the destruction of its landscape. Recently established progressive political parties, constituted through alliances between progressive social movements including platforms for the defense of human rights and local grassroots organizations, have taken office of Spain’s most important cities, including Madrid, Barcelona and Palma de Mallorca and have been passing policies that regulate mass tourism.

Through visits to the three cities, meetings with leading scholars, architects, activists and politicians and through a design research workshop, the Spain Summer Study Abroad Program will develop critical spatial visualizations that support activists’ claims on tourism and provide reformatting tactics of the sector. We will spend a week in Madrid and in Barcelona, where apart from exploring and studying the key sites and effects of mass tourism, we’ll also visit well-known and internationally acclaimed architecture projects by leading architecture offices including Enric Miralles, Herzog & de Meuron, FOA, Iñaki Ábalos, Juan Herreros, Mansilla y Tuñón, Rafael Moneo, Manuel Ocana, Morphosis, ZuloArk, Ecosistema urbano, Langarita y Navarro, MAIO, etc. On our arrival to Palma de Mallorca, we will embark on a 10 day long workshop in collaboration with the museum of modern and contemporary art of Palma de Mallorca, Es Baluard, and with students and faculty from the school of Architecture of Madrid (ETSAM) and the Universidad Europea.

The work produced in Reformatting Tourism will be exhibited in EsBaluard, a major art institution in Spain, and will be presented to the local and national media. The goal is to produce documents that trigger a discussion outside of our academic bubble and in the general public on critical reformatting tactics and strategies that create an awareness and pursue a sustainable balance between the visited and the visitors.
